Fusion at its best

On January 18, PREM JOSHUA and MANISH VYAS wowed music lovers at the Osho Commune with an East-West fusion concert. The duo played pieces from two albums - The dance of the Shakti and Water Down the Ganges at - the Commune's Buddha hall.

They used contemporary grooves on Indian-based melodies. Being a meditator himself, Prem's music deals with the quality that helps in bringing a deeper silence in the gaps. Both the artistes mingled the backtracks of their music along with the live performance on musical instruments and vocals.

Prem played on the sitar, Soprano Sax as well as the Bamboo Flute while Manish blended in perfectly with his performance on the tabla, santoor and keyboard. Also staged was The Ferryman's Tale, which was choreographed and performed by MARCO and HEENA.
